Good Guys' Variance Denied

Good Guys recently applied for a variance to move its car stereo installation shop from west of the 405 freeway to its store at Pico and Westwood. Good Guys explained that the proposed move was meant to keep its customers from having to buy car stereo systems at one location and then having to drive to another for the installation.

When Good Guys first applied to open for business at Westwood and Pico, a condition was placed on the store prohibiting installation of stereo equipment. The condition was imposed out of fear that customers and installers of the equipment would test the equipment and create a nuisance for area residents.

After hearing testimony, the city's hearing officer denied the variance.
